You're there to attack, kill, destroy, win. Commit to having that mentality the whole time. Don't go in with the "let's see what happens first"...that's exactly the kind of thing that makes you second guess yourself and increases your chances of losing. There's a difference between being smart and being cautious.

The action and fight scenes are very well staged, especially one with a tender reunion in the midst of the mayhem. Big Adam's warming to his younger version gives the story some heart in the midst of the mayhem as well. There is genuine tenderness in his realization that anger does not prevent sadness and that second chances are possible.
